1. Into the woods

Once upon a time there was a sweet little girl whom everyone loved. Her grandmother had made her a little red riding hood, and because she looked so charming in it, she was called Little Red Riding Hood. One day her mother said, "Take this cake and bottle of wine to your grandmother; she is ill and weak, and they will do her good. Walk properly and do not leave the path, or you may fall and break the bottle." Little Red Riding Hood promised to obey, and set out through the wood with her basket.

2. The wolf on the path

Little Red Riding Hood had not gone far when a wolf met her. He wished her good day, and asked where she was going. "To my grandmother's," she said, "who lives in the little house beyond the mill." The wolf thought to himself, "What a tender young creature ? she will be a delicate morsel." But he dared not eat her, for there were woodcutters nearby. So he walked beside her and said, "See what pretty flowers grow here! Why do you not look around?" Little Red Riding Hood raised her eyes and, seeing the sunbeams dancing through the trees, ran from the path to pick a nosegay for her grandmother.

3. At grandmother's door

Meanwhile the wolf ran straight to the grandmother's house and knocked. "Who is there?" "Little Red Riding Hood," answered the wolf, disguising his voice. "Lift the latch and come in," said the old woman. The wolf sprang in, swallowed the grandmother at one gulp, put on her cap, drew the curtains, and lay down in her bed. When Little Red Riding Hood arrived, she was surprised to find the cottage door standing open. She went to the bed and drew back the curtains. There lay her grandmother, but she looked very strange.

4. The woodcutter's rescue

"Oh, grandmother," she said, "what big ears you have!" "The better to hear you with." "What big eyes you have!" "The better to see you with." "What big hands you have!" "The better to seize you with!" "What a dreadful big mouth you have!" "The better to eat you with!" And scarcely had the wolf said this than he sprang out of bed and swallowed Little Red Riding Hood. A huntsman passing by heard the snoring, looked in, and cut open the wolf with his knife. Little Red Riding Hood and her grandmother sprang out, unharmed, and there was great joy in the cottage.
